Biscavne Bay offers great fly fishing opportunities year 'round for a number of coveted saltwater species making it a great place for a Miami fly fishing gear, either way you will have a great time on the water. Fly fishing in Biscavne Bay can take many forms but the most common Miami fly fishing charter is for bonefish, permit and tarpon and for these elite species, a good Miami fly fishing guide is essential. For most of the fishing miami fly fishing charter is for bonefish, permit and tarpon and for these elite species, a good Miami fly fishing guide is essential. fish such as fly fishing for tarpon a 10-12wt will fit the bill just right with the 12wt reserved for the larger fish during the tarpon migration in spring and early summer where they can reach upwards of 100lbs. For large permit, a 10wt will have the muscle to turn these big wide bodied fish in the current and towards the boat. and weighted requiring a heavier weight line and rod in order to throw properly. Floating line will get 95% of the use while fishing for most of the species but there are times when we fish for mutton snappers or mackerel and an intermediate line will prove more successful. Leaders with intermediate fly lines are typically short (about 4'-6'), nontapered and made of fluorocarbon in order to protect from abrasion and sink quicker. Leaders for most other types of fishing in Biscayne Bay consist of 12'-14' tapered leaders made of soft monofilament ending in a fluorocarbon class tippet and bit tippet if needed. Miami Fly Fishing originates in Biscayne Bay which is world famous for its beauty and history and is home to some amazing flats and islands. While you will be enamored by its beauty, the fish can be equally as spectacular. Bonefish, permit and tarpon all cruise these waters and seasonally big sharks and other species move through as well. The bay is also home to a great spring tarpon migration that will really get your heart thumping as you see huge pods of triple digit fish come swimming at you in crystal clear water. This is not a sport for the weak minded....these fish will test even the best anglers abilities...and we'll have a blast targeting them. What we'll use when fly fishing in Miami The fly tackle: most days an 8 or 9 weight rod is appropriate for bonefish; a 9 or 10 for permit and 10-12 for big tarpon. A good saltwater reel spooled with ample backing and a good weight forward floating line will be our primary go-to rod. We'll talk about specifics prior to your trip. Fly patterns we'll use will include a variety of bonefish patterns, crab patterns, crab patterns for permit and a good mix of tarpon flies. Spin tackle fishers will mainly be using bonefish jigs. Final thoughts on Biscayne Bay Fly Fishing trips: This is a great day on the water for those who enjoy the beauty of clear, oceanside flats and who don't have the trip to the Keys. Depending on the species we're after, we'll pole the flats, working the feeding patterns until we spot tailing or cruising fish and get vou set up to make the cast. While fishing in crystal clear water is some of the most challenging in the world-its also the most challenging in the world-its also the most incredible. To return to more Miami lies Biscayne National Park. It's 173,000 acres of salt water, coral reefs, mangroves, islands, and parts of Biscayne Bay itself. The area is best known for its massive coral reef network, which one of the largest found on Earth.Both scuba diving and snorkeling are popular sports in the area, and you can spot many dive boats and buoys if you are out on the water. and permit that roam these waters. The water isn't the only part of the park that teems with life either. Aquatic fowl, raptors, alligators and crocodiles also call the shores and islands of Biscayne home. Vast mangrove swamps and salt flats can be found here, as well as shallow bays and inlets. Mosquitos are thick in the summer, and both thunderstorms and hurricanes are frequent in the region. The best part about visiting Biscayne National Park is how close it is to Miami and Homestead, Florida. It's easy to get in and out of the park without having to take long deserted stretches of road, and most every part of the park is accessible by boat if you prefer boating to driving. There are plenty of places to fish, though if you are looking to land bonefish and tarpon you may want to hire a boat to take you out into the bay to try your luck there. Fly fishing from the shallows can yield decent results, but the largest fish roam further out onto the water. Come prepared to land some big fish, as the tarpon in the area can weigh as much as 180 lbs. Despite their large populations and massive size, these fish are anything but sluggish, and even skilled anglers may find themselves with a serious fight on their hands. If you are seeking to test your mettle and skill against some of the fiercest fighting fish on the North American Coast, Biscayne National Park is the place to go. Biscayne National Park Fishing Map Best Places to Fish in Biscayne National ParkMany of the best fly fishing spots are only accessible by boat, but don't let that stop you. You can still find marinas, docks, and trails leading down to some prime fishing spots in and around Biscayne National Park:With a 1.5 mile jetty extending into Biscayne Bay, this is a prime fishing spot for snook, barracuda, bonefish. Blackpoint is surrounded on all sides by immense forests thick with vegetation and wildlife, and the fishing here is exceptionally good. To get here, head toward south Miami-Dade and take the Ronald Reagan Turnpike a little southeast of Goulds and Cutler Bay. Safety Value/Featherbed Bank/Cape FloridaAnglers looking to land some permit around Biscayne is where the permit love to feed, and may be tempted to strike at shrimp and crab flies. Featherbed Bank is home to large schools of bonefish in and around the edges of the banks. They are fond of shrimp flies, especially when you make them skitter across the surface. Finally, Cape Florida a little west of south Key Biscayne is likewise an excellent spot for landing bonefish. Follow the coastline down, and you should have no trouble pulling in some larger bonefish for trophy pics before releasing them. Indian Grass FlatA little to the southeast of Biscayne National Park is Indian Grass flat home to large populations of sea trout. friendly. Best Time to Fish in Biscavne National Park. The most important part of planning your trip is making sure you know when hurricane season begins and ends. From June to November the weather can be rough around Biscavne National Park, and you may arrive in Miami or Homestead only to discover you can't get out on the water or jetty due to high winds and violent thunderstorms. Peak season for fly fishing in and around Biscayne National Park, that largely between December and April, as the big fish swim to warmer waters in the south from their summer playgrounds along the northern east coast of the United States. As for what time of day to fish Biscayne National Park, that largely depends on the species you are looking to catch. Snook, for example, strike better at night, whereas the local trout tend to be more active in the cooler hours of the morning or the late evening. Tarpon, red drum, and other saltwater fish tend to be active in the shallows earlier, and then you will want to follow them out by boat later in the day.Biscayne National Park Fishing TipsFor smaller and medium game fish, you will want a 9-foot fly rod with a matching fly reel and 9-weight line. 20 lb. tippet is a must, and intermediate full sink fly line is what you need if you are fishing with artificial shrimp or baitfish flies. For larger game fish, like tarpon, you'll want a 10- to 12-weight rod and 40 lb. tippet. Also, mosquitoes are everywhere in Florida, and if you are headed into Biscayne National Park, you need to go with the strongest insect repellent you can find. Be prepared for intense head and humidity too, especially if you are visiting in the spring and summerBiscayne National Park Flyen BoxHere are some recommended flies that have proven effective for fishing in the Biscayne National Park region: Merkin Crab (#2)Skittal Mantis Shrimp (#2)Skittal Mantis Shrim of area fly shops and guide services that can provide an update on current fishing ReportBiscayne National Park. A few to check out are listed below. Orvis Fishing ReportBiscayne National Park does require a Florida State Fishing License for anyone over the age of 16. Licenses are issued by the Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission. As accommodations go, you have plenty of choices. There are plenty of budget motels and hotels all around the park itself right down to the beaches of Biscayne Bay. If you are feeling fancy, you can even book a stay at the skyscraper resorts in Miami and be a quick boat ride from the best fishing spots in the park. Several of the major hotels there even have jetties and marinas that lead right up to the hotel entrance. For those who prefer to travel by RV or prefer to rent one after flying in, there are plenty of RV parks in the area. Sometimes you can score a bargain on your stay that puts you right next to the prime fishing spot of your choice. Feature image by Catholic 85
